

Comments Feb 3, 2015 by people on the Internet

We are getting crushed with snow from two weeks of relentless storms.

If you want snow, just come to "Vacationland".

This week's storm of the century!

How many more will we have this winter?

I would take summer and spring all yr round.

Living in Minnesota for almost 50 years and we have winter and snow for almost 6 months every yr.

Snow and cold and darkness starts at about 5pm in the winter.

And we can have average of 17 F and also get weeks of way below zero with wind chill factor.

Hard to drive in the snow and ice and many accidents and wearing boots and big coats for months is no picnic.

I would love to move if I didn't have to work.

We may continue to get unwanted visits from the polar vortex.

I love the snowstorm that has been coming in New York so I can enjoy playing my badass snowmobile in the snow.

I do not mind the cold weather.

Why can't we break out of this Arctic pattern?

What is causing the air flow to be completely locked into place?

What event needs to occur to allow for warmer air?

Why can't the warmth from out west ever reach the east, even in a modified form?

It's painful when you see warmer air a mere 100 miles away, yet it never arrives.

I felt that way in December 2013 when my area was getting hit with a major ice storm while your area was getting record warmth.
